It won't do for the companies to put on a few more cars, or run on quicker headway. The remarks of the official show the ordinary attitude of the corporations towards the public, which has granted them their valuable franchises and is end of bills put in by contractors who have them their valuable franchises and is enriching them with its patronage.

To accommodate their patrons is a secondary consideration with these companies. All they care for is a big balance at the end of the quarter, and if they can secure greater profits by imposing on the people and refusing to accord them what they are rightfully entitled to they do so without hesitation.

And if it requires boodle to strengthen their positions they regard the bribery and corruption of the people's representatives as a perfectly legitimate metaod of securing their ends.

You deserve the thanks of every taxpayer in New York for your fearless expose of that grasping monopoly, the Metropolitan Traction Company. They have John D. Two very good suggestions have been offered to remedy the evil. There are trailers on the Broadway and Third Avenue roads during the rush hours, and relays at Sixty-fith atreet and Sixth street, mornings and evenings, on the Third Avenue road.

There are really no tailors in the fine custom line that can compete with this firm. They buy all their goods direct from the manufacturers, they discount all their bills, they manufacture all their own stock, and by these as well as other good business methods they save their customers a neat sum of money. Their idea of business is expressed by "Large business and small persentage."
